

Do you speak Klingon?

This is one of a variety of languages which will be made available today for Myspace users to learn. Learn it is a new widget for social network sites - released later today on myspace.com.

The widget works with a list of 10 words from a chosen language on your home page. Every day you get a new list. If you visit your page frequently every day you'll have repeated exposure to the 10 words, which will stick in your memory in exactly the same way as advertising.

“We wanted to create a product that would be useful to people. Learning a new language is something most English speakers rarely have time for, we hope Learn it will change that.”

Learn it will teleport to Facebook soon.

More info:
www.learnitlists.com

Quotes

Nicola Robinsonova of everydayenglish.cz says:

“The very best way learning any language is to live in an area of the Universe where that language is spoken. If that's not possible, contact with native speakers is really important.”

Wikibooks.org article 'Why learn Klingon'

“the language of self-absorbed reality-impaired nerds that believe in Star Trek and think Vulcans will soon land in their back yard”

http://en.wikibooks.org/wiki/Klingon/Why_learn_Klingon

More info about Klingon available here:

<http://en.wikibooks.org/wiki/Klingon>